BRAND BACKGROUND

Founded 1911. Over 100 years. Sold in 100+ countries. Key models (Silverado, Equinox, Malibu, Camaro). Chevrolet's bowtie logo history. Current market position: #2 US auto brand by volume.

BRAND KEY

Layer	Content
Root strengths	Reliability, affordability, wide model range
Values	Boldness, accessibility, optimism, American pride
Personality	Adventurous, approachable, determined, real
Promise	A vehicle for every journey in life
Essence (center)	"Find New Roads"

PROBLEM

THE CORE PROBLEM

Gen Z doesn't have a relationship with Chevrolet — not a negative one, just no relationship at all. Chevy has never spoken to them directly, in their language, on their platforms. The brand is invisible where this generation lives.

KEY DATA POINTS

62%

of Gen Z car buyers consider Toyota, Honda, or Hyundai first — Chevy rarely makes the shortlist

49

Average age of a Chevrolet buyer — rising every year as younger buyers go elsewhere

18–34

Age group Chevy needs to win — the largest upcoming car-buying demographic in North America

3rd

Chevy's brand consideration rank among 25-year-olds, behind Toyota and Honda

WHAT THE CLIENT ASKED FOR

- Increase brand consideration among 18–34 year olds in Canada and the US
- Make Chevrolet feel culturally relevant and aspirational to a younger demographic
- Challenge the perception that Chevy is "old-fashioned" without alienating existing loyal customers

Target Audience

First Time
Buyers
18–24

College students and new grads entering the workforce. Making their first major financial decision. Researching online, influenced by peers and social content.

Young
Professionals
25–30

Settling into careers, upgrading from their first car. Practical but style-conscious. Values reliability, tech features, and brand authenticity.

Young
Families
31–34

Life-stage upgrade buyers looking for space, safety, and value. Heavily influenced by partner input. Responds to real-world utility over aspirational messaging.

Customer Personas

Jay

Age 22 years

The Scroll to Buy Shopper

Tiktok + Reddit

Pain Point: Feels talked at, not talked to by car brands

Goal: Wants a car that fits his identity, not just his budget

"I don't want a dealership speech. Show me real people driving real cars."

Arya

Age 27 years

The Pragmatic Climber

Instagram + LinkedIn

Pain Point: Chevy feels like her dad's car — not her vibe

Goal: Needs reliability and tech but won't sacrifice cool

"If the car doesn't fit my aesthetic, I'm not even test-driving it."

Albert

Age 32 years

The Responsible Adventurer

Youtube + Facebook

Pain Point: Overwhelmed by options, wants a brand he can trust

Goal: Family practicality without feeling old

"I want proof it's built for people like me — not just families from the 90s."

The Six: Creative Brief

The Client

Chevrolet (GM) — an iconic American auto brand with a heritage dating back to 1911, currently battling irrelevance with the next generation of car buyers.

The Problem

Gen Z doesn't have a relationship with Chevrolet — not a negative one, just no relationship at all. Chevy has never spoken to them directly, in their language, on their platforms. The brand is invisible where this generation lives.

The Target

Gen Z first-time buyers and young professionals, ages 18–34. Digital natives who value authenticity, identity-driven brands, and peer validation over traditional advertising. They buy what resonates with who they are, not just what fits their budget.

The Proposition

Chevrolet is the car that drives your story — not your parents'. Built for people who are writing their own chapter, not following an old one.

The Tone

Real. Unscripted. Confident without being loud. Culturally fluent — speaking Gen Z's language without trying too hard. The tone of a brand that earned a seat at the table, not one begging for attention.

The Mandatories

Feature at least one vehicle from the Chevy lineup (Trax, Equinox EV, or Silverado). Must include the Chevy bowtie logo. No traditional "car commercial" format. All content must be mobile-first and platform-native. Campaign hashtag required across all executions.

Campaign Roadmap

Working backwards from September 2026 peak Gen Z automotive engagement window

KEY INSIGHT: September 2026 is the strategic peak — back-to-school season drives the highest Gen Z social engagement and automotive search volume of the year.
